HOW COULD IT HAPPEN?

Report slams 'unexpected levels of ignorance and inappropriate actions' by police and council staff in disturbing modern slavery case

by Rachael Burford

Local democracy reporter

A VULNERABLE woman who was found starving, beaten and forced to work as a slave was returned to her suspected trafficker in a major blunder by council officials.

The woman, who had learning disabilities, was discovered by chance, filthy and freezing and apparently living in a garden shed when bailiffs raided a house in east London.

Neighbours later said they had seen her showering naked in the garden and being forced to unload scrap metal from vans, but they had been too frightened to alert the police.

Barking and Dagenham Council bosses arranged for the woman, who is in her thirties, to be accompanied by her stepfather when she was returned to Romania in December 2016, despite him having been apparently involved in her trafficking and abuse.

After fast-tracking the flights from Luton Airport, one boss was apparently heard to joke: "This is good, Brexit works."

The woman's removal — which enraged frontline staff concerned for her welfare — breached national guidelines allowing her more time to recover in safe accommodation after being accepted as a victim of modern slavery.

Social workers in Romania say the pair have been missing since April last year. After a "shocked" health worker turned whistleblower, a report was commissioned by Barking and Dagenham Safeguarding Adults Board.

It said she had probably been forced back into slavery, and criticised "significant failures" in the way the council handled the case. It added: "Ultimately, services failed to ensure her protection and this should never be allowed to happen again."

The woman first came to the attention of the authorities in November 2016 when she was spotted by bailiffs sheltering under a mattress in the garden of the east London property.

She smelled of excrement and appeared to have been kept as a slave.

The bailiffs called police but the woman was bundled into a van at knife-point before officers arrived.

She was later traced to another property in east London several miles away, at which time she was taken into care.

Her stepfather and two Romanian youths found at the second property were held on suspicion of false imprisonment, but the police investigation was dropped less than two months later.

The report said police failed to treat the stepfather as a suspect, despite his apparent involvement in removing her from the first house and her indicating that he hit her while drunk. "Scarring, suggesting burns" were found on her leg and thighs but police and council staff "appear not to have acted on this evidence of possible physical abuse", the report found.

'Homelessness levels among capital's worst'

by Alice Richardson

Local democracy reporter

WALTHAM Forest is one of the worst boroughs in London for homelessness levels and levels of temporary accommodation outside the borough.

The council is also in the bottom eight for the percentage of people earning below the London Living Wage and cuts to benefits.

According to figures from charity Trust for London, Waltham Forest is placed 30th out of the 32 London boroughs for homelessness levels, 30th out of 32 for temporary accommodation placements outside the borough and 27th out of 32 for benefit cuts.

Currently, of the 2,299 temporary accommodation placements offered by Waltham Forest Council, more than half are outside the borough, with many families involved including young children.

In the 2016/2017 financial year, Waltham Forest benefit claimants lost an average £257 per year from their income.

Cllr Simon Miller, cabinet member for economic growth and high streets, said: "There is huge pressure on housing in London and the council is being proactive in its efforts to tackle the issues.

"We have recently started one of the largest council-house building programmes in the borough's history,

REPORT: Waltham Forest is 30th out of 32 boroughs according to a charity which has the ambition to provide 1,400 new homes for local residents.

"Ensuring all our residents have a decent roof over their heads is a priority for us.

"We care deeply about the livelihoods and life chances of our residents, which is why we are being proactive and attracting the extra investment which will provide even more opportunities for them in Waltham Forest.

"Projects such as the redevelopment of the Mall in Walthamstow will help us to achieve this.

"The council is a London Living Wage employer, and has recently agreed with GLL that leisure centre staff aged 18 to 20 will be paid the London Living Wage. This shows we are determined to secure a decent wage not only for our employees but for our contractors' staff too."

Jobless rates fall

UNEMPLOYMENT rates have gone down, latest figures show.

The Department of Work and Pensions says Waltham Forest and Redbridge each saw an overall decrease in the amount of people without a job.

For 18 to 24-year-olds in Waltham Forest 600 are unemployed and claiming Universal Credit.

That is 12 per cent fewer than in 2017 and 70 per cent fewer than in 2010.

Across Waltham Forest, a total of 4,065 working aged adults are currently unemployed.

That is equal to a one per cent decrease since 2017 and a 52 per cent decrease since 2013.

In Redbridge, there are 410 18 to 24-year-olds who are currently out of work.

That is a 75 per cent reduction in the number of unemployed individuals in that age band since 2010.

Borough-wide, there are currently 2,585 working aged adults that are unemployed. That represents a one per cent increase since 2017, but a 61 per cent reduction since 2010.

Nationally, unemployment is at its lowest level since 1970, with four per cent of the population registered as unemployed. The national employment rate is 75.5 per cent.

London-wide, 4.73million people are in work and the unemployment rate has gone down by 67,000 in one year.

London's employment rate stands below the national average with 74.7 per cent of Londoners in work.

Boy, 14 locked up for knife attack

A BOY has been locked up for four and a half years after stabbing a man outside Woodford Tube station.

The 14-year-old, from Woodford Green, admitted grievous bodily harm at the Old Bailey on September 14 and was sentenced on the same day.

Police officers and the London Ambulance Service attended reports of a stabbing outside Woodford station just before 5.30pm on March 15 and found an 18-year-old man suffering stab injuries.

He was taken to an east London hospital for treatment to injuries to his abdomen, and has since been discharged.

Police said four other males were arrested but charges against them were discontinued at court.

Thousands support youth

CROWDS flocked to Barking and Dagenham's fifth Youth Parade. About 7,000 people supported borough youngsters on Sunday, September 16. More than 1,000 young people took part in a colourful display, ending with celebrations at Barking Abbey. Cllr Saima Ashraf, deputy leader and cabinet member for community leadership and engagement, said: "So many of our borough's young people continue to make a wonderful contribution to life in Barking and Dagenham. I'd like to thank everyone who turned up to support them, and I hope that they enjoyed a great day out in the September sunshine."

'No one comes out well'

Brian Parrott, chairman of Barking and Dagenham Safeguarding Adults Board, said the case exposed "unexpected levels of ignorance and inappropriate actions" by police and council staff.
An interpreter who spoke the woman's Roma dialect could not be found and the people she accused of abusing her, including her stepfather, were allowed to take part in interviews with her that were conducted by social services.
"[She] used gestures to describe how she had been beaten, locked in a room and deprived of food and water," the report states. "Her stepfather stated that she should not be listened to due to her disability."
"It is now known that there was not an effective police investigation carried out and the stepfather was never spoken to either as a witness or a suspect."
At a meeting of the council's health and wellbeing board this month, Mr Parrott said an "action plan" had been put in place since the report was published in February. "No one comes out of this well and we must ensure nothing like this happens again," he said.
A police spokeswoman said officers had received extra training to identify slavery cases, adding: "We have invested in a dedicated team, the Modern Slavery and Kidnap Unit, to target offenders as well as supporting colleagues with investigations."
Barking and Dagenham said it was committed "to raising the profile of issues relating to modern slavery, and to ensuring systems and staff training [are] in place to ensure such practice does not arise in future".
The Home Office estimates that there could be up to 13,000 victims of slavery in Britain.
Charities such as the Walk Free Foundation have argued this figure is far higher as many cases go unnoticed and unreported.
